O. Harkness.

In the lower court of Utah, before Judge Rolapp, the case was reversed, Harkness being the plaintiff. The case, which involved a demand of Harkness of $100,000 from the bank, was then a heavy stockholder to be allowed to examine the bank's paper, was carried to the Supreme court of the State, and there the judgment of the lower court, which was in favor of Harkness, was affirmed.

From this judgment the bank appealed, and on Friday Mr. A. R. Heywood, representing the bank and accompanied by Mrs. Heywood, will leave for Washington to argue the case. It comes up October 19.

TROUBLE AHEAD FOR OFFICIALS

Ogden Officials May Lose Their Offices on Account of Law.

Special to The Tribune.

OGDEN, Oct. 4.—The prospects are that candidates for county offices in the coming municipal tickets and applicants for other elective or appointive offices in the municipality will run against a snag if they happen to be railroad employees or in the employ of any other corporation or company that is operating under a franchise or charter granted by the municipality of Ogden.

Opinion of District Attorney.

District Attorney George Halverson today announced that there are a number of railroad employees who are candidates in the approaching election, on both tickets for councilman places especially. This is a strict variance with the constitution, said Mr. Halverson, "Sec. 17 of Art. 12 of the constitution reads and defines that 'no officer, employee, attorney or agent of any corporation, company or association doing business under or by virtue of any municipal charter or franchise shall be eligible to or hold any office or appointive office in the municipality.'"

Law May Intervene.

"It has been called to my attention," said Mr. Halverson, "that a number of railroad employees are candidates for the coming election. I am not certain whether or not my office has the authority to intervene. If it has I propose to institute quo warranto proceedings in every such case of election or appointment and have them ousted from office."

It is time that we begin to observe the constitution of this municipality," Mr. Halverson intimated that there are now a number of city officials and some councilmen who are employees of the corporations and are also serving the city, and that these might be attacked for violation of the provisions of the constitution.

IMITATING NOTED PLAYERS.

Cecilia Loftus Says It Is Easier to Copy Men Than Women.

"There is no easy road to success as an imitator," says Cecilia Loftus. "At least, I have never found one, for everything I have done has meant hard work. Of course, there are natural mimics, and for them to imitate another person's gestures and manner of speech is easy, but I do not think they attain to real success. The very facility with which they achieve their results imposes a limitation. They are not impelled to the hard work by which alone one can get inside, as it were, and reveal the real personality of the actors and actresses they portray."

"As for myself, I was never given, as a child, to mimicking people, and the way I came to enter the field is rather curious. I saw a performance at a music hall in London at which a girl gave imitations of various actors and actresses. The thought occurred to me that I could do better myself. I do not think it was a manifestation of conceit, for she was really not very good. I had always wanted to act, and I made up my mind to try that if one could get an engagement to do that sort of thing I would have a try at it. So I started and worked to get a part myself. I went to the theatre and watched the actresses. I intended to imitate, and then practiced their speech and manner of acting. I made up my mind to do that if one could get an engagement to do that sort of thing I would have a try at it. So I started and worked to get a part myself.
